MANAGER COMMENT

During March global markets benefited from the positive outlook on global economic recovery gaining momentum. Even with the persistent rising US bond yields, new European COVID-19 restrictions and continued inflation fears, most major markets posted gains for the month. Vaccination programmes continued to be successfully rolled out in most major developed markets, with almost 600 million doses being administered worldwide.

The possibility of higher US inflation was reinforced when during its meeting in March, the US Fed confirmed that it would maintain the near-zero interest rate policy and monthly bond purchasing programme. US private sector payroll data posted its largest gains in six months and the Chicago PMI for March recorded its highest level in 30 months, coming in at 66.3 (where a level above 50 indicates expansion, while below 50 signals contraction). Business and consumer confidence data in Europe rose, as hopes of an end to the pandemic and a pickup in economic activity surfaced. Both German and Eurozone manufacturing PMIs hit record highs on the back of a demand rebound. In the UK economic data has been better than expected, despite the country being in its third COVID-19 lockdown. Markets in China continue to feel the pressure over the Chinese government's move to ratchet up regulation and anti-trust scrutiny on the largest Chinese corporates. China's official March manufacturing PMI came in at 51.9, slightly higher than February's 50.6.

In South Africa less than 0.5% of the population has been vaccinated, although it was recently announced that 11 million doses of the J&J COVID-19 vaccine had been secured, with an additional 20 million doses expected soon. The acquisition of the double-dose Pfizer vaccine is also being finalised.

The South African Reserve Bank (SARB) met during March. The outlook for the country's growth prospects remains cautious, due to an anticipated third wave of COVID-19 infections and continued Eskom issues. The SARB moderately increased its 2021 economic forecast by 0.2%. In February annual consumer price inflation (CPI) slowed to 2.9% YoY vs January's 3.2%. This marks the third time in the last year that annual inflation has moved below the SARB's 3-6% target range, making interest rate hikes within the next few months highly unlikely.

Global equity markets benefited from improving economic optimism, with the MSCI World returning 3.11% in US dollar. Emerging market equities lagged somewhat during the month and were down 1.70%, mainly held back by China. South African markets rose for the fifth consecutive month, as the All Share gained 1.58% for the month. On a sector basis, Industrials delivered a return of 1.59% for the month, marginally outpacing Financials and Resources, which closed the month at 1.13% and 1.35% respectively. The rand strengthened 2.57% against the US dollar and 5.93% against the euro. Due to the strong local currency, the MSCI World index returned a mere 0.53% and the MSCI Emerging Markets Index -4.17% in rand terms for the month. SA listed property (as measured by the SAPY) gave 1.23%. SA bonds (ALBI) lost 2.54% and cash (STeFI) returned 0.31%.
